

In the paper titled, “The Importance of Providing Play and Learning Materials for Children with Physical Disabilities in Saudi Arabia: The Perceptions of Parents”, the author (s) present the findings based on a content analysis of 30 Chinese international students. According to the author(s), the findings provide readers with a unique perception of parental role in providing learning materials for children with physical disability. Yet this manuscript contains several issues that should be addressed before it will be suitable for publication.

Introduction/literature

- Please provide research questions
- Please frame/describe your research questions in its context. For example, what issues are Saudi Arabian parents of children with physical disabilities? What literature did identify key issues or debates to clarify barriers, or practical needs for Saudi Arabian parents. I recommend that you add a section that provides readers with a basic understanding of children with physical disabilities in Saudi Arabia.
- Provide the rationale for fit of your research design if possible.

Methodology

- Please provide a rationale for using content analysis, and help readers understand why this combination is suitable for this study.
- Please provide a qualitative research method (e.g., ground theory)
- Explicate in detail the process of analysis, including some discussion of the procedures following a principle of transparency.
- Describe coders and their training. For example, your research team
- Describe the process of arriving at an analytic scheme (e.g., consensus conclusions among research team members?)
- Describe how your findings are warranted with methodological integrity and consistency with regard to the analytic processes (e.g., transcripts returned to participants for feedback, members checks, consensus or auditing process).

Others

- Please provide limitations
- Please provide implications for future research
