Based on the abovementioned argument, countries with different levels of development should work together to provide a secure and sustainable international environment for world economic activities and achieve mutual benefit and win-win results. Developed countries should maintain their regional advantages and attract foreign investment through high-tech development and relatively perfect infrastructure. Furthermore, they should shoulder the responsibility of big countries, safeguard the multilateral trading system, actively participate in the reform of the World Trade Organization, and promote the multilateral and bilateral regional investment and trade cooperation mechanism. Emerging economies should strive to improve their own scientific and technological level and innovation capacity, maintain their own resource endowment advantages, and promote infrastructure construction in a coordinated manner. Moreover, they should actively participate in regional economic cooperation, promote trade and investment liberalization and facilitation, expand investment space, and improve the investment guarantee mechanism. ↵

Finally, thank you again for your patient reading and criticism. We hope you will find this revised version satisfactory. If you have more suggestions or questions, please kindly let me know.

Best regards.
