REVIEWER 2

Thank you for reviewing our manuscript titled “Emerging Resistance of Neglected Tropical Diseases: A systematic review of the literature.” We sincerely appreciate your constructive reviews and recommendation for publication.

General comments

This is an interesting manuscript, bringing an extensive revision focusing on the emergence (or established) drug resistance for major tropical diseases, highlighting the absence of clear data about this threat, even in some parasitic disease under mass drug control. There is no doubt that pharmaco-resistance is of major concern, consideration the lack of alternative and effective antiparasitic drugs for the most NTDs, therefore it is important to provide accurate information’s, as discussed in this MS, in order to prevent or minimize the spread of drug resistance.

Overall, the MS is clear and well written and the selective methodology seems adequate for this kind of research, based on results of field studies performed with so distinct protocols. I recommend the MS publication.
